The Guidebook with Standing Rules Preamble

The Guidebook with Standing Rules is a living document and instrument focused on the progressive needs and operations of the Texas Society of Radiologic Technologists, Inc. (TXSRT). This manual is designed to empower each Executive Board Officer, leader, and advocate on effective best practices, expectations, and role definitions. Each person charged with any role subject to this guidebook and its standing rules is obliged to learn its content, perform the duties prescribed, and maintain the effectiveness of this document. The Guidebook with Standing Rules is instituted and managed by the Executive Board.

Mission Statement

The Texas Society of Radiologic Technologists Inc. (TXSRT) is convicted to the promotion of superior patient care standards, professional quality, empowerment toward a culture of healthcare shareholders, and protection from encroachment in the interest of medical imaging and radiation therapy. The TXSRT is invested in all modalities and related areas of our profession to provide an inclusive and diverse platform to thoroughly articulate our position and value within the delivery of patient care. TXSRT shall be dedicated to advancing the professions of medical imaging and radiation therapy, maintaining high standards of education, enhancing the quality of patient care, and advocating for the welfare and socioeconomics of medical imaging professionals and radiation therapists.

Chief Operating Values Education
Professionalism Advocacy

Understanding the Depth of Our Values

1. Education – Identifying and endorsing minimum entry level and practice standards governing our preparedness and qualifications as medical imaging professionals and radiation therapists.
 - a. Competency – demonstration of the minimum knowledge of medical imaging and/or radiation therapy qualifying professionals as such according to national registry standards and state licensure guidelines.
 - b. Critical Thinking – the ability to effectively apply didactic and theoretical objectives to clinical performance, evidence based best practices, and variable situations requiring prudent discretion.
 - c. Proficiency – mastery exceeding the expectations of previously stated objectives to create further value through research, publication, innovation, and/or other advancements dedicated to our profession as well as the professionals employing the same.

2. Professionalism – acknowledging our role in patient care and the delivery process through exceeding expectations established by our patients, our profession, and our governing bodies to impress our value as community partners in health care.
 - a. Integrity – above all promoting and prioritizing patient care beyond any other standards which may impede or conflict with the same.
 - b. Rapport – the accountability of and investment toward each relationship created and maintained between our professionals and our patients, our colleagues, and our interdisciplinary partners regardless of any demographic parameters.
 - c. Mentorship – the commitment to fostering an environment conducive to producing quality mentors and welcoming mentees simultaneously. Futuristic culture creation and long-term vision to evolve emerging leaders, encouraging prospective advocates, and inspiring unintended interests.

3. Advocacy – forming a unified voice amplifying our engagement and dedication to our roles, values, and establishment not limited to intrastate or interstate borders aligned with other medical imaging and radiation therapy advocates, reciprocally.
 - a. Articulation – accurately and effectively educating internal and external audiences to concepts not limited to what medical imaging and radiation therapy is, who medical imaging and radiation therapists are, and why our profession and its professionals are critical components of patient care management, the health care systems, and our respective communities.
 - b. Representation – appropriately exhibiting the quality and excellence of our profession to command respect, influence consideration, and promote recognition across an interdisciplinary platform.
 - c. Investment – the proven commitment of internal promotion and opportunity creation among fellow professionals and therapists to drive advancement and professional wellness to progressively greater heights.
